'The properties themselves promise to be as special as the surroundings, ranging from one-bedroom apartments to penthouses with private pools'

Montenegro was described as 'the most beautiful merging of land and sea' by Lord Byron and this picturesque Southern European enclave still enchants all who visit it. Rugged mountains reach down to the coastline, and the small country has two UNESCO World Heritage Sites, in recognition of both the landscape and a rich cultural history encompassing Venetian and Ottoman influences.

Making the most of this spectacular setting is Portonovi, a new €550 million development on the edge of Boka Bay. It falls within the Kotor World Heritage Site, close to mild beaches, breathtaking mountains and an expanse of ocean. Built predominantly on land reclaimed from the sea by the Montenegrin navy a century ago, it's a yacht-lover's paradise. The naturally protected, deep-water marina has berths for 230 superyachts, providing an ideal base from which to explore the surrounding area and offering easy access to the Adriatic. More tranquil than traditional Mediterranean destinations, Portonovi offers an abundance of space and state-of-the-art facilities. At the heart of the marina will be an exclusive yacht club by Winch Design, one of the most respected names in the yachting industry.

The properties themselves promise to be as special as the surroundings, ranging from one-bedroom apartments that start at €324,000 to penthouses with private pools. There's also a range of luxurious villas built in a secluded part of the development, but still close to the high-end retail areas and restaurants.

No two residences are the same, with a choice of different layouts and views, each individually furnished by The Studio at Harrod. Everything is tailored for the highest comfort. And if your true home is on the waves, you can sleep soundly, knowing that your beloved boat is close by. So close, in fact, that you can see it out of your window, meaning that the next adventure is merely a stroll away.

The first phase of the development is set to open in the second half of 2017, with work due for completion by 2020. For more information, visit www.portonovi.com
